TAX REDUCTION OF FORTY CENTS FOR DALY CITY

The new tax rate for 1928 was set by the city council, at its regular meeting last Monday night, at $1.50, and $1.25 in the newly annexed district.

The new tax rate makes a reduction of 40 cents over the rate of last year, and comes at a time when many cities are increasing the tax rate, rather than making a reduction in the taxes of property owners.

A petition was presented asking the closing of East Theta avenue. This block being only 120 feet long and a 22 per ccent grade, it was pointed out to be a dangerous and unnecessary entrance to Mission street. After the matter was explained to the council by City Attorney McCurdy, the same was ordered advertised and legal steps taken, with a date for protest being set.

On motion of the council the city clerk was instructed to write a letter of thanks and congratulation to the El Carmelo Parlors of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West on their splendid showing and advertising they gave Daly City at the Admission Day celebration at Santa Cruz.

The park committee reported that they are now going to make some improvements to the playgrounds in the Vista Grande section, and invites any suggestions from any of the residents of that district that are interested.

The council adjourned to meet again on September 26, and invites all residents to attend and learn how their progressive city is being managed.

INCREASED INTEREST AT GRACE CHURCH

The attendance and interest at Grace Presbyterian church last Sunday was the best of many months, with ninety-eight at Sunday school and a well filled house for the evening worship, with the Christian Endeavor fine.

Twelve of the young workers are out for 200 at the rally day services, which will be held on September 25, and we trust that when these enthusiastic workers come to you that you will respond by giving your consent to be present one hour on that date.

The sermon next Sabbath evening will be from the theme, "The Midling Man; Who is He and What is He, and What do You Think of Him?" Come and let us draw some pictures to help awaken the district. A special interesting time will be had.

The church is now deciding before the world, if it has a right to live and go on with its work, by asking the people to support and attend. You are deciding this by your attitude, whether you will or not.

Mr. McKnight, formerly a real Christian builder of this city, but now of Redwood City, was a guest of the pastor of Grace church on Tuesday evening of this week. He still has a warm feeling for the community.

Ten members of the Ladies' Aid Society met for the sewing circle on Wednesday afternoon and Mrs. Noble, of San Jose avenue, served a most excellent lunch to the ladies of the society.

Mrs. R. E. Fletcher, of Templeton avenue, presented the Grace church with a most beautiful vase for the flowers on the pulpit stand. The church appreciates this act of kindness and thanks the donor most heartily.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

SMALLEST MONKEY TRAVELS IN POCKET OF ITS OWNER

C. H. Richards, able seaman, whose home is at 3320 San Jose avenue, is the owner of a pet that has created a great deal of interest during the short time he has been in Daly City. Jocko, Jr., is the name of Richards' constant companion, and he is a diminutive monkey that weighs about three ounces, although he is a year old and measures only twelve inches.

Jocko, Jr., hails from Bahia, Brazil, and only by the utmost care was Richards able to nurse him through the climate changes and bring him safely to this city from his tropical home. In a box lined with a woolen blanket he was protected against the weather. Now he is used to our climate, and seems to like it.

The bright-eyed little fellow makes himself at home wherever he goes, riding snugly in Richards' pocket and leaping to his shoulder whenever he is called. He and Mr. Richards are the center of attraction for the small tots of this city.

Peace Disturbers Land in Jail

Two local Belgian residents were sentenced Thursday to six months in the county jail at Redwood City for disturbing the peace. Sentence was passed by Judge Ellis C. Johnson.

BOTTLENECK WILL BE BROKEN SOON

The Colma bottleneck will be broken early in November, Colonel John Skeggs, State Highway Commission engineer, announced Wednesday.

"This has been the largest and most difficult job of its kind in the history of California," Colonel Skeggs said in answer to many protests over the delay.

"We have had more trouble breaking the bottleneck than we have had on any other highway stretch in the state.

"We were tied up eight months obtaining rights-of-way, and then when we had won our court fights we had to eject forcibly some of the tenants who refused to move.

"Meanwhile, of course, we were grading and working on the right-of-way we had, but that was slow work. We have had to move pipes, poles, driveways, buildings and the Colma creek. We could not move the tracks in one piece, because the Market Street Railway Company would then have had to shut down its service.

"Just when we thought we might make good progress, came the heavy rains and that stopped us. For months we could not move a finger.

"But now everything is progressing rapidly. We are hampered, of course, by the heavy travel, but we are making the best possible speed.

"I hope the work will be completed by November 1, but it may not be finished until November 15."

In thirty days, Colonel Skeggs said, the new highway on the west side will be in use, but it may be necessary to control traffic.

"Then we can spend all our time working on the east side," he added.

The paving contract was let six weeks ago, and concrete is now being poured.

PASTOR ATTENDING ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Rev. Elliott L. Fisher, pastor of the Daly City Mehodist Episcopal church, left Wednesday to attend the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which is being held this year in Sacramento. He will return Tuesday to begin his work for the new church year.

The Epworth League is arranging a special program for the evening service next Sunday evening. Four laymen will speak, Mr. McKee, Mr. Cashion, Mr. Williams and Mr. Moffitt. You will be interested in this service, and also the special musical numbers that will be a feature of the program.

Sunday morning the Sunday school, under the leadership of Mr. Harry McKee, will have charge of the service. Come to Sunday school at 10 o'clock and stay for the special service conducted by the Sunday school during the church hour.

We are all happy to learn that the Daly City Epworth League won the banner for the largest attendance of any League in the San Mateo County Alliance, during the recent retreat at Kings Mountain. The League attendance has been rapidly increasing and all of the young people are doing their best to make it one of the finest Leagues in the county.

Last Sunday the church attendance was not as large as it has been, due to the holiday period, and also to the fact that many of the young folks were in attendance at the Epworth League retreat. We expect to see a larger attendance next Sunday. Come and show your loyalty to the church by backing the laymen in their efforts to present to you their subjects.

In the Senior Quarterly can be found these words:

"I belong to the church because I ought to be better than I am. Henry Ward Beecher once said: 'The church is not a gallery for the exhibition of eminent Christians, but a school for the education of imperfect ones.'

"I belong to the church because every man ought to pay his debts and do his share toward discharging the obligations of society. The church has not only been the bearer of good news of personal salvation; it has been and is the supreme uplifting and conserving agency without which civilization would lapse into barbarism and press its way to perdition.

"I belong to the church because of memories—memories of things I can never forget, memories of faces that will never fade, memories of vows that are the glory of youth.

"I belong to the church because of hope—hope that lives when promises are dead, hope that paves the way to progress, hope that visions peace and social justice, hope for time, and hope for eternity—the great hope that casts its anchor behind Jesus Christ.

"I belong to the church because of the strong men in it who need reinforcing, the weak men in it who need encouraging, the rascals in it who need rebuking. If I say that I am not good enough, my humility recommends me. If I sit in the seat of the scornful, my inactivity condemns me."

NATIVE SONS DRUM CORPS WINS CUP IN ANNUAL CONTEST

El Carmelo Parlor No. 256, Native Sons of the Golden West Drum Corps and their many friends are rejoicing over their achievement at Santa Cruz on Admission Day.

These boys were determined to win, and went forth with one purpose in mind, "to bring home the bacon." The "bacon" is now on display in Ernie's butcher shop at the Peninsula Market. It is a beautiful silver cup, presented to the Native Sons Drum Corps for exceptional druming and marching in the annual Admission Day parade, held this year at Santa Cruz, and represents second place honor for Daly City's parlor of Native Sons.

Their unusually neat and attractive appearance, along with smart drilling and druming, met with approval all along the line of march. Dressed in white, with blue and gold neckties, arm bands and belts, they caught the eyes of the onlookers, who wondered who they were. A gold band on their soft felt hats told the tale, along with the lettering on the bass drum.

Truly these boys deserve congratulations for the wonderful showing they made and the cup they brought home. Daly City is proud of them.

LEPROSY-SIN, THE TEXT OF SERMON

Sermon preached by Rev. James P. Donohoe last Sunday:

The church frequently refers to sin as a serpent because it is most subtle, because it is satanic in its malice, artifice and punishment.

This present age sneeringly rejects whatever is tinged with the marvelous. Yet a snake is marvelous, and everything about it mysterious, secret and astonishing. Some snakes are harmless and some deathful. The movements of a snake differ from any other living thing. It is impossible to say where its locomotive principle lies. A snake disappears like a shadow and appears like a flashing sword. He curls himself in a circle and projects fangs of fire; he rolls in a ball and gives to his rings the movement of a wave; twines around trees; glides under the grass or skims the surface of water. His colors change with each point of view, and he possesses the false splendor and deceit of a treacherous temptor.

Like a murderer, he knows how to throw aside his garments stained with blood lest they lead to detection. The snake passes months in sleep, frequents tombs, inhabits secret retreats, produces poisons that chill, burn or spot the body of a victim with the same colors by which it is marked. The eye of a snake fascinates birds and makes them powerless. Naturally it enters into the moral and religious ideas of men as a perfect example of sin—an object of horror and hatred.

In her gospel today, the church suggests another symbol of sin—leprosy. When we hear the word "Leper," we instinctively recoil, for we associate it with what is abhorrent and loathsome. Unconsciously our imagination photographs the setting that met Chrit's eyes. Ten sadly afflicted men by the roadside covered with a hideous leprosy, ulcerated from head to foot. The sun, with all its noon day fever, beat fiercely upon their heads. Every man who saw them, fearing contamination, fled. They turned their languid eyes to Christ—and with a faint voice appealed to Him for mercy, and received it. Leprosy always suggests the idea of sin—both blight everything they touch. Leprosy ends in death; Sin's doom is death and hell.

There is a growing tendency among many people outside church to disbelieve in hell. There are two classes: Those who think God is too good to dam them, and those who think they are too good to be damned.

To prove God is too good, they will paint a word picture of hell. Here is a patient in a hospital—an alcohol bath is prescribed—the electric lights go out and a candle is pressed into service. The fumes ignite and soon the patient and bed are a mass of flames. Terrific screams pierce through the corridors; the rescuers breathe the sickening odor of burning flesh. Happily deatch can end this terrible torture. They tell you to continue that suffering on through every year of eternity, and you have an idea of hell. They will add that God, Who made man to His Own image and likeness, could never wreak such terrible vengeance on His children. It is true He is infinite in His goodness and mercy, but He is also infinite in the severity of His justice. Angels blighted by sin are now devils.

The Bible, the word of God who cannot lie—the only basis of the true religion, contains many graphic descriptions of hell. We read, "And the

COURT HEARING ON REDISTRICTING SET FOR TUESDAY

Hearing on the return of the alternative writ of mandate, secured by Attorney John F. Davis for the redistricting of San Mateo county supervisorial districts, will be held in the Superior Court room at Redwoon City next Tuesday at 10 o'clock.

The date for making a return on the writ was changed from Monday to Tuesday by Superior Judge J. Welch of Santa Clara county, who will preside at the hearing. In granting a public hearing at Redwood City, Judge Welch stated that he believed that the matter was of vital interest to citizens of San Mateo county and they should be given the opportunity of hearing the arguments.

A demurrer to the writ of mandate is to be filed by District Attorney Franklin Swart on behalf of the board of supervisors. He seeks to determine how far the courts have jurisdiction in redistricting, and whether or not it is not up to the supervisors, a legislative body, to do this. If the court can order redistricting and then fix boundaries, it is usurping the legislative powers of the supervisors, District Attorney Swart contends.

SOUTH CITY UNDEPASS FORMALLY OPENED

Costing approximately $250,000 and considered one of the major engineering feats on the coast this year, the 100-foot underpass at the Southern Pacific right-of-way on the Bay Shore boulevard immediately south of South San Francisco was formally opened yesterday with appropriate exercises.

An official caravan of nearly 200 cars from Burlingame, South San Francisco and other San Mateo county cities, was the first to enter the dipping roadway, which has been excavated three feet below sea level. Then there were speeches, music by bands, cheering, waving of flags, display of flowers and a general jollification before the public was allowed to swam through. Mrs. Ira Potter, wife of a South San Francisco banker, christened the underpass.

The first car to make the passage entered the underpass from the south. In it were representatives of three Burlingame organizations: John D. Bromfield, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Laura Audry, of the North Burlingame Commercial Club, and J. H. Hurlburt, of the Broadway Development Association. This car led the caravan from Burlingame which met a similar procession of representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and Commercial Club of South San Francisco in that city and proceeded on a tour of the district. The procession ended at the concrete bridge across the underpass, where a program of speeches was delivered. The principal address was by Congressman Richard J. Welch of San Francisco.

DALY CITY LIONS CLUB TO ENTERTAIN PUBLIC

The members of the Daly City Lions Club, the local civic service organization, have completed all arrangements for a dance to be held tomorrow night, Saturday, September 17, at the Daly City Auditorium, and are expecting one of the most representative crowds ever to attend a party of this kind in Daly City.

The dance is being given mainly that the people of this city may become better acquainted with the ideals and plans of the Lions Club, and incidentally to add something to the funds of the organization, which is working for the betterment of every resident of the district.

Everyone is invited to be present, and it is the hope of the committee in charge of the affair that all who wish to aid in the advancement of the city be present.

TOWN OF BELMONT IS DISINCORPORATED

The incorporation of the town of Belmont was illegally effected, and the community now stands disincorporated. This was the gist of a decision rendered yesterday afternoon by Superior Judge John L. Hudner of San Benito county, before whom the case was tried in the court of Judge George H. Buck at Redwood City.

Suit demanding that Belmont be disincorporated was filed by John W. Burdette, attorney, who owns considerable marsh lands in that vicinity. Burdette alleged irregularities in the proceedings, specifically claiming that the law requires that the consent of owners of acreage be secured before its inclusion in a new city, and that this was not done in his case.

The decision of Judge Hudner is far reaching and means that the town of Belmont ceases as a municipality, because it has never legally existed.

TAX COLLECTOR'S SALARY RAISED

County Tax Collector Ambrose McSweeney will receive an increase of $500 per year in salary, under a ruling issued last Saturday by Superior Judge George H. Buck. A court order directing County Auditor John J. Shields and Mrs. Grace L. Cooper, county treasurer, to honor the demand of Tax Collector McSweeney for the increase, was issued, with a retroactive clause which provides for the payment of the increase from January 1 of this year. The order was made under a recent law which provides the increase for duties in connection with county license collections.

Tax Collector McSweeney recently petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel payment of the increase, including a claim for $41.66 each month since January, when, he alleged, the increase became effective.

The petition was based on an act of the legislature increasing the salary of county tax collectors who serve as collectors of county license fees. Under a previous act, providing that county officers shall not receive an increase of salary during their terms of office, McSweeney made no claim for the increase, but has claimed it since January, when he entered upon a new term, his petition stated.

County Auditor Shields declined to honor the claim, pending a court ruling, and was named defendant along with Mrs. Cooper in the petition filed by McSweeney. A ruling from Attorney General U. S. Webb held that it was the intention of the legislature to grant increases of $500 per year to county tax collectors for their increased duties in collecting county license fees, although the method adopted was "open to doubt."

District Attorney Franklin Swart held that the duties of county license collector were already provided for in the salary of the county tax collector and that the claim could not be legally sustained.

CAPTAIN SHANGHAIED WHILE ON VACATION

Captain F. W. Winter, of 659 San Diego avenue, Daly City, former sea captain, and who saw many years of service with the U. S. Navy, has had many exciting experiences during his career on the high seas, but was never shanghaied. The Captain claims, however, that since retiring from active service he has had that experience.

Recently he took a trip to Boulder Creek on a heavily loaded truck, the trip being in the nature of a vacation, in company with M. Selmi, who is building a summer home at Boulder Creek, the truck being laded with lumber and building material.

On their arrival at Boulder Creek the Captain was put to work in the construction of the building, and kept hard at it for ten days, until the building was completed. He admits, however, that he had the time of his life, with plenty to eat and jolly companionship, and does not hold it against Mr. Selmi for his retention at Boulder Creek during that period. However, he was glad to get back to Daly City.

After long discussion as to a name for the new home, Captain Winter suggested that they call it "Caprive Capravo de Monte Cuculo," in honor of the minister of the Italian navy some twenty years ago, an acquaintance of Captain Winter.

BANCITALY ISSUES HUGE DIVIDEND

Bancitaly Corporation, the huge investment trust which, under the guidance of A. P. Giannini, has made millions in profits during the past few months of a soaring stock market, has cut another huge melon.

A stock dividend of one share for every seven shares now held was declared Wednesday, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 56 cents per share. At the present price of $110 per share, this melon amounts to $65,562,500.

That will be the value of the 650,000 shares that are to be presented to the stockholders, figured at seven-eights of the present price, since the present outstanding issue of 4,550,000 shares will be increased by one-seventh and the value of each share reduced accordingly.

The stock dividend is in the nature of a Christmas gift, Giannini smilingly declared, to be presented in ample time to permit stockholders to do all the celebrating they want to.

It will be paid on or about October 10 to stockholders of record September 24. The new certificates will bear date of October 1, however, so that they will carry the full dividend for the last quarter at the rate now paid on stock outstanding.

The ink is hardly dry on the recent stock dividend of 40 per cent. The new dividend increases the stock that has been presented to shareholders this year to 54 2-7 per cent.

BOARD REFUSES FRANCHISE FOR SPAN OVER BAY

No further franchises to bridge San Francisco bay will be issued by the San Mateo county board of supervisors until the vehicular bridge from Little Coyote Point to Hayward is completely financed and the project is well under way.

This was the attitude taken last Monday by the supervisors when they denied an application of R. W. Thompson to bridge San Francisco bay from Candlestick Point to Alameda. The application was dismissed without prejudice.

A continuance of ninety days was requested by Frank Aiken, attorney for Thompson, in order that the financing of the Coyote Point bridge might be completed. In event the finances had not been secured, Aiken was willing to ask for another continuance.

J. E. McCurdy, who headed the Burlingame and San Mateo committee of business men which opposed the project, stated that if the application were not denied, sponsors of the Coyote bridge would have a difficult time financing their project.

"Capital is timid," Mr. McCurdy stated, "and if the way is not made attractive there will be difficulty in obtaining money. One million dollars has been secured, and incorporation papers are now on the way to Delaware. There must be no slipup."

Following Mr. McCurdy's talk, Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey moved that the franchise be denied. Supervisora Rosalie Brown seconded the motion, and it was carried by a unanimous vote.

After the franchise had been denied, Supervisor James B. McSheehy of San Francisco thanked the supervisors for their stand.

It was indicated that the franchise application of Frank E. Webb, which will be heard October 3, will meet a similar fate. Webb seeks to build a bridge from Candlestick Point to Bay Farm island.

A joint highway district to build a road from San Francisco to Santa Cruz was formed by a resolution passed Monday. Counties in the district are San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Cruz.

GOOD SHOWING MADE BY COUNTY AT FAIR

San Mateo county made an excellent showing in the State Fair awards of premiums for plant vegetables. The competition in this department was particularly keen at the State Fair.

San Mateo county took two places in the sweepstakes award for plant vegetables. The county was also awarded the following premiums:

First — Raspberries, blackberries, nectarines, Swiss chard, head lettuce, egg plant, mellons, chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, navy beans, raspberries, jelly, zinnias, foliage plants, flowering plants.

Second—String beans, cauliflowers, green peas, artichokes, garlic, bell peppers, celery, varieties lettuce, varieties rhubarb, Wagner's giant rhubarb, sweet corn, variety peas, sweet peas, asters, dahlias, canned raspberries, canned strawberries, canned corn, cucumber pickles.

IMPROVE APPROACHES TO DUMBARTON SPAN

Football fans from all parts of California will find the Dumbarton highway bridge in perfect condition when they motor over it next month to attend the preliminary games to be played at Palo Alto, according to an announcement by H. N. Baker, secretary of the bridge corporation.

Baker said that more than $30,000 is being devoted to improving the approaches to the bridge on both sides of San Francisco bay. The work is being rushed, he said, in order to have everything completed for the football motorists who are expected to use the bridge this year in great numbers. Dumbarton opened shortly after the last Stanford-California game had been played at Berkeley, and was unavailable to the football hordes who motored to the Stanford field to witness the preliminary games played there.

The roads forming the approaches to the bridge proper will be widened to twenty-two feet from the present eighteen feet, and six illuminated double-faced signs which are now under construction will be in operation by the end of September, Baker added. These signs, which will be welcomed by many motorists who have complained in the past that they had difficulty in reaching the bridge at night, will be located at San Lorenzo, Pleasanton, Niles, Menlo Park, Redwood City and at the intersection of the Ringwood and the Middlefield road.

TOURIST TRAVEL SHOWS INCREASE

That the appeal of Northern California playgrounds to the pleasure seeking tourist is stronger this season than heretofore is evidenced by the large number of motorists who have made holiday visits to the various resorts in the northerly part of the state during the present year.

While bay traffic in general has increased this season, additional travel on the northerly routes is especially noticeable. Over the Labor Day holidays Southern Pacific company carried 196,550 passengers and 32,766 automobiles across the bay. A three hundred per cent increase in the use of the direct Richmond ferry service by motorists was noted in the figures issued.

In 1926 this route which runs north from the Ferry Building to Richmond carried 399 automobiles for the same period this year. The completion of the Carquinez bridge popularized the Richmond ferry route to such an extent that Southern Pacific added another boat to the line.

Don't miss seeing Joan Crawford and Carmel Myers in "The Understanding Heart," at the State Theatre, this Saturday, September 17. The popular Kiddie Revue will also be presented.

LEPROSY-SIN, THE TEXT OF SERMON

children of the kingdom shall be cast into exterior darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." In another place we read, "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the Living God—for the Lord, thy God, is as a consuming fire."

The Gospel of St. Luke XIV-23, describes a man in hell and lifting up his eyes when he was in torments he saw Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom and he cried and said, "Father Abraham, have mercy on me and send Lazarus that he may dip the tip of his finger in water to cool my tongue—for I am tormented in this flame." Although there are men who profess a disbelief in hell, this does not alter the fact of its existence. It is their word against the teaching of the followers of Christ and His church.

The second class is composed of people who because of a false sense of security have reached the stage of moral irresponsibility. They attempt to justify their evil vice, and constant indulgence lessens the thought of its consequence. Ignoring God's laws, they soon substitute a false standard of their own. "I'm only a weak human; surely God never intended that for a sin." There is not a thought of sorrow, no thought of resolution, of amendment, no restraint to avoid the sin in the future. God forbid, but if a man of this type is a Christian there is no thought of repentance. Ostrich-like he bows his head in the sands of self-delusion. "I give alms," he says; "I am a friend to my fellow man; I go to church—once in a while." Tell him that soon his heart would be pierced by the swift stroke of death and his standards would undergo an immediate change. The mask of deception would soon be dropped, otherwise he realizes that the end of his biography would read, "And the soul of that man went to hell."

How great must be the agony of a soul in hell—without hope, forever tossing on the ocean of despair; always dwelling on the thought, "I have lost God forever and lost Him through my own fault; I might have been saved, and now I am lost for all eternity." With what agony will such a soul look back to the moments of grace, to an innocent and holy childhood, to a fervent first Holy Communion, to a thousand graces and blessings. Then it will recall the first sin. How it will hate and curse the accomplice who taught that first lesson of sin; for criminal instinct searches for someone to fasten the blame for its downfall. How worthless will all those things be that lead to the poor soul's downfall. "I did but taste one drop of honey and behold I die." The pleasures of sense were but one drop of honey that brought with it death. The creatures which were preferred to God have all turned to dust and ashes. A few days sickness, and beauty fades, no matter how great and splendid it once appeared. In this life our vision is dazzled by the objects of sense around us, and so we do not see that God is necessary for us, and without Him we cannot be happy.

How will death find you? Suppose the words I utter never reached their destiny—would death find you prepared? Salvation depends upon one thing—when we die are we the friends or enemies of God? If you are the friends of God, go on with His helping, holding the burning light of faith given to you at baptism; go on unfaltering to the end.

No one can rob you of God's friendship. To lose Him must be a free, deliberate act of your will.

If you are in mortal sin, do not wait till your death bed, for then your senses will be drugged and sluggish. You would not defer making your will until your death bed. Do not defer willing your immortal soul to God for all eternity. "Come," He says, "now and always."

Come to Him with the confidence of the lepers. As He cleansed them, so can He cleanse your souls from sin. He can make of those souls something stainless and pleasing—something upon which He can center His interest and love forever and ever.

UTILIZING THE BASEMENT

An entirely new type of American home has come into existence as a result of manufactured gas service.

Architects and builders now plan homes with usable rooms in the basement—libraries, ballrooms, play rooms, billiard rooms, music rooms. This is made possible because gas reguires no storage space and makes no dust or ashes.

In new real estate developments every precaution is being taken to prevent the beautiful subdivisions from being marred by smoke. The garbage collector and coal man are giving way more and more to gas operated incinerators and furnaces.

The greater livability secured in small houses makes it possible for people of relatively small means to have their own homes. The saving in space in the cellar gives greater efficiency for large families, and the extra play rooms take the boys and girls from the streets and keep them at home.

Mexico has nearly six hundred federated labor unions.

Some go crooked as a result of taking their liquor straight.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT INSTALLED BY BANK

A travel department that can arrange anything from a world cruise to a jog in an Irish jaunting car has been installed by the Bank of Italy.

J. T. McClellan, special travel representative of the International Mercantile Marine in a number of countries for a number of years, has been installed as manager. The offices of the new department are with the international department of the bank in the Merchants Exchange Building, San Francisco. Other offices will be established elsewhere.

The department will handle all phases of rail and steamer travel in any part of the world. McClellan, an expert on world cruises, expects to make up a number of globe circling parties.

A feature will be the establishment of an airplane travel service to arrange trips by air on the continent and elsewhere. It is expected that this feature will be particularly popular, in view of the interest being taken in aviation in the United States.

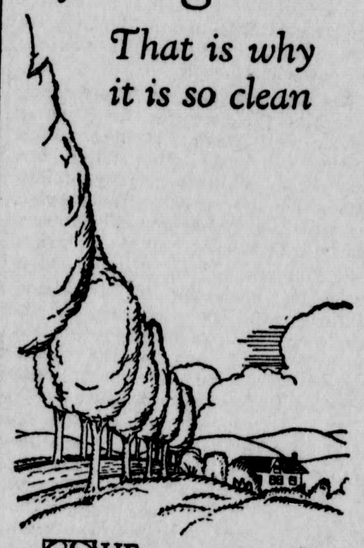
A travel bureau was installed under the direction of L. M. Giannini, vice-chairman of the board in the Bank of Italy and son of A. P. Giannini, the founder of the bank. The feature is somewhat of an innovation for western banks but is expected to greatly stimulate the rail and highway travel of California and all other phases of passenger transportation.

The clean fuel

for the home

Every bit of Gas is "scrubbed" before you get it

That is why it is so clean



THE gas you use in your home for cooking, water heating and house heating is "scrubbed"—every bit of it—before it goes through pipes into your home.

In the scrubbing process the gas passes through a series of large tanks. It is washed with water and purified. The lampblack, tar and sulphur are scoured out. Only pure, washed gas passes into the network of mains.

That is why gas is such a clean fuel.

And it's all fuel. No waste — no soot — no work to use it. It instantly burns with intense heat from the moment you strike a match until you turn off the tap. It's always ready for use.

Because gas is so clean and convenient, a gas range, gas water heater or gas-fired furnace saves your time and effort.

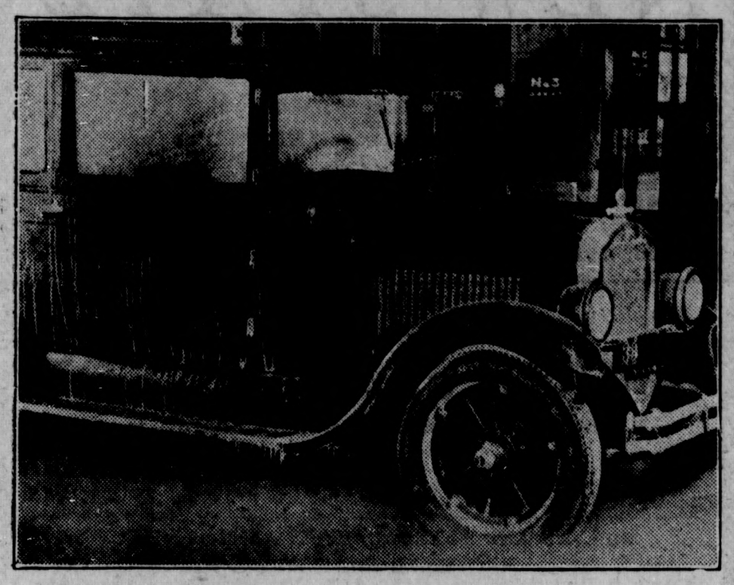
AUTOMOBILES UNDERGO COLD ROOM TEST



Cars undergo a severe test before being sold to the public. At a Detroit laboratory automobiles are given the "cold-room" test, where cars are operated under a temperature of about 35 degrees blow zero. The photograph shows an automobile just emerged from the "cold room."

SIX POINTS OF RIGHT DRIVING

Experts Tell How Man at Wheel Should Handle Car at All Times.

"What are the characteristics of a good driver?"

This was the question which Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association, recently asked a jury of seven nationally known traffic experts.

"Their replies were strikingly similar," declared Fred H. Caley, secretary of the Cleveland Automobile club, in making public an analysis of their opinions, "for these seven men were entirely in accord on six major points of good driving." They are:

Six Major Points.

1—The good driver must have a high degree of self-control at all times.

2—The good driver always maintains his car in such shape that it responds easily and quickly to his every command.

3—The good driver regulates his speed in accordance with the conditions of the road on which he is traveling and never exceeds a rate of speed above which he cannot stop within the "clear course ahead."

4—The good driver invariably exercises due regard for the rights of others to enjoy safety on the road.

5—The good driver recognizes his responsibility as a protector or guardian of the safety of pedestrians and by using caution at all times will eliminate, so far as possible, accidents due to the carelessness of others.

Keeps Mind on Wheel.

6—The good driver keeps his mind on what he is doing; is always watchful and alert.

In announcing the results of this questionnaire, Mr. Caley remarked that it is more necessary to instill within motorists a realization of their responsibility in making the highways sare than it is to enact additional restrictive legislation.

Wise Pa Parks Ma With Babies on Rear Seat

It's a wise father who arrives at his destination with the original number of children that filled up the family flivver when the trip started. Bill Brown, Friend Wife and their four youngsters, reinforced by enough lunch to feed a young army, left for an outing last Sunday. Pa and ma sat in the front seat and the little Brownies occupied the rear. They had gone about a mile when Baby Bobby was reported to be among the missing. The boy had opened the door and fallen out of the machine. Luckily, he wasn't injured, either by the fall or other automobiles, having landed in a pool where he was enjoying himself when the family located him. Brown thus learned one of the lessons which should be remembered by family men who go on auto trips, i. e., that it is better to have Friend Wife a back-seat driver than to be minus a baby.

Sneeze Alibi Frees Man Whose Car Killed a Girl

Although he confessed he was driving at the rate of 40 miles an hour when the crash took place, a salesman was exonerated by a coroner's jury which accepted his defense that a violent sneeze caused the accident in which his woman companion was killed. It was agreed that he lost control of the car when he suddenly sneezed but the jury apparently overlooked the violation of the speeding ordinance.

Preventable accidents of the above type emphasize the fact that speed is a contributing cause of accidents. A man who is driving through city streets at the rate of 40 miles an hour may think he has his machine under perfect control, but it is always the unexpected circumstances that cause unusual accidents. A dozen things may cause you to lose control and re-

Remove Automobiles and Trucks From Mudholes

Much time and energy are wasted by motorists in trying to remove automobiles and trucks from mudholes or ruts, especially when the automobile or truck carries a heavy load. One truck operator found that this can easily be done by means of two cleated boards of suitable length and width, as shown, placed at the width of each rear wheel. The other end of the board is raised to about the same height as the rear axle, and a chain tied to the raised end and the rear axle. The board should be forced under the front part of the rear wheel to get the necessary traction. When the roads are exceedingly muddy, a second type of board, as shown here, which has a hinged piece to prevent the wheel from slipping off again after it is once on, will be found more serviceable. The boards can be conveniently carried on the running boards.—A. Bereskin, Winnipeg, Can. in the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Post-Office Department Now Using 6,982 Autos

There are now 6,982 automobiles, government-owned and under contract for carrying mail, in the Post-Office department, figures made public show. Air-mail planes in 1925 flew 2,500,000 miles the figures also show, 14,145,640 letters being carried by the latest method of transportation.

There are in operation 45,314 rural routes, supplying 31,000,000 individuals. Rural carriers in 1925 traveled 1,234,153 miles daily and 337,650,871 miles during the year.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

More than 2z0,000 motorists from other states and foreign lands visited California last year, according to the California State Automobile Association which welcomes incoming motor tourists at its twenty-seven offices with maps, touring data and necessary permits. The travel tide this year is reported as much greater.

San Francisco's building activities have shown a steady increase during 1927, a monthly report issued last week by the Bureau of Building Inspection shows. A total of 848 permits issued last month for buildings estimated to $3,609,611, as against 723 permits in July for buildings costing $3,560,314. In August, 1926, a total of 862 permits were issued for structures estimated at $4,163,510.

Exceeding every monthly total of 1927 and bearing positive proof that Los Angeles is heading for one of the greatest seasons of construction in its history, city building permits valuations for August reached $11,790,916, according to the city building department tabulation.

Nearly a million dollars a year is spent in California in controlling rodent pests and approximately $100,000 in the poisoning and trapping of predatory animals, according to Paul G. Reddington, chief of the Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. "Predatory animals," said Mr. Reddington, "take a heavy toll of agricultural and livestock products annually, and are also a menace to beneficial wild life. This is especially true of lions, coyotes and bobcats."

A new dormitory for women, costing between $250,000 and $350,000 and housing 125 students, will soon grace the University of California campus at Berkeley, the gift of Mrs. Philip Ernest Bowles. Announcement of the gift was made last week by President W. W. Campbell. The building will be a memorial to the late Philip Ernest Bowles, university regent and a financial pioneer of California.

The old West is gone forever, and even the cattle rustlers of these modern days have given up cow ponies for limousines. Sheriff Ellis Jones of Sacramento county was last week requested to be on the lookout for a band of 1927 cattle rustlers alleged to have raided a Yuba county stock ranch last week. The "rustlers" were reported to have fled in a large sedan after herding six young calves into the tonneau of the vehicle.

Another long-distance marathon race is in the offing. This one is set for New Year's Day, and will be from Capitola to Monterey, a distance of 22 miles. The Capitola Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the event, believe that the $25,000 prize will lure the greatest aquatic stars in the world. Entry blanks will be available next month.

A $132,000 building—the largest of its kind in the country—in which will be housed all the college publications of the University of California, is the dream of the executive committee of the Associated Students of the university. This was disclosed last week when the committee approved in principle a plan to build such a building. Under the plan being worked out, the new building would provide a home for the "Daily Californian," the "Blue and Gold," the "Countryman," the "Engineer," the "Commercia," and the "Literary Review."

In the annual struggle among directors of the various fairs to obtain something new with which to attract and entertain visitors, the heads of the Southern California fair, to be held at Riverside September 27 to October 2, have this year added an aviation division. Stunt flying will not be featured, but all models of planes from the tiny air speedster to the giant three motored passenger-carrying ships will be on display. The agricultural and live-stock departments, which have always been the back bone of the Southern fair, have not been neglected. Anticipating larger exhibits, additional space has been provided.

San Francisco is now enlisted in the ranks of the cities with traffic rules in conformity with the code which is being generally adopted throughout California. In adopting the recommendations of the San Francisco Traffic Survey Committee last week for a new system of traffic control in the city, the Board of Supervisors took action which gives a definite impetus to the movement for standardization of city traffic rules throughout the state. The legislation adopted embodies all main features of the uniform traffic ordinance for California cities sponsored by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California with only such changes as were necessary to meet street conditions peculiar to San Francisco.

Of 14,985 felony charges preferred in California during the last two fiscal years, only 694 terminated in acquittals, Governor Young was advised last week in a report submitted by Attorney General U. S. Webb.

Neither time, effort or money is being spared to make the sixth Los Angeles county fair, at Pomona, September 20 and 24, an outstanding success in every department. Several features have been added, that are somewhat in the nature of a surprise, and which no doubt will prove a delight to the thousands of visitors who Foreign corporations doing intrastate business in California, who wish to go out of business here, need no longer file a notice of their intention with the secretary of state, Attorney General U. S. Webb has just opined.

The third of the amendments to the California Vehicle Act affecting operators' licenses is that which treats with reckless driving, recognized as one of the most serious offenses in motor vehicle operation. Formerly, three convictions for speeding within a year constituted automatic revocation of the operator's license. The law has been amended to provide that the Division shall forthwith revoke the license of any person convicted upon three charges of reckless driving within a period of 12 months from the time of the first conviction.

The new thirty-story Russ building on Montgomery street, between Pine and Bush streets, San Francisco, is now completed and is being occupied by tenants. The Russ structure is the tallest building in San Francisco and the largest office structure on the Pacific Coast. In the building of the giant structure, which affords an unsurpassed view of the bay and the Pacific Ocean on clear days, 22,000 yards of concrete, 9,000 tons of structural steel and 1,500 tons of reinforcing steel were used.

M. E. Armstrong, building inspector, in making a survey of the buildings in Redlands now under way and to be started before the end of the year finds the following buildings being completed; Mutual Orange Distributors, $50,000; Physicians' Building, $30,000; school buildings, $200,000; Y.M.C.A., $150,000; university chapel, $200,000; university hospital, $20,000. Buildings to be started soon are West Coast Theater, $400,000; community hospital, $200,000; high-school auditorium, $200,000; Edison warehouse, $40,000

California's three-day "cooling off" period before the granting of a marriage license apparently prevented at least 60 couples from getting married during its first full month of operation, a report of Recorder Edmond Godchaux indicated last week. During August a total of 591 marriage certificates were recorded in San Francisco as against 652 during the same month a year ago. Papers filed during the month showed a substantial increase over those in August a year ago, with 6,507 as against 6,008. The recorder's office shows a net gain of $737.20 in fees for the month with $11,376.35 taken in this year as against $10,639.15 in August, 1926.

For the week immediately following the Santa Ana Fair, which was held September 5 to 10, four of the most important expositions of the September season are scheduled. The Stanislaus county fair at Modesto opens on September 12 and ends on the 17th; the Kern county fair at Bakersfield is scheduled for September 13 to 17; the big Ventura county fair at Ventura will run for five full days from September 14 to 18, and the San Diego Farm Bureau fair will run on the same dates as Ventura. Wonderful displays of community products and entertainment features galore are announced for each of these events.

"Whenever there is a child within a marked crosswalk on your side of the street, you are required to permit this child to pass in front of your machine before you may proceed over the crossager of the public safety department walk," states D. V. Nicholson, man- of the California State Automobile Assocition. "And this rule applies when either adults or children are in the crosswalk. At unmarked crosswalks the motorist's duty is the same as at those marked, if the pedestrian raises his hand to indicate his intention to claim his right to cross. Also, it is unlawful to pass a machine at a crosswalk which has stopped to permit a person to cross in front of it."

Enactment of a State law compelling every transpacific aviator to carry a sea gull with a container for messages attached to its leg was recommended to Governor C. C. Young last week by Louis Jacobs of San Jose. Declaring his unusual proposal would prevent "ocean suicides," the San Jose man urged legislation on the theory that whenever an airplane fell into the Pacific the sea gull would fly back to the mainland with a message showing exactly where the forced landing took place.

Announcing preliminary plans for the licensing of approximately 18,000 barbers, the State Board of Barber Examiners last week served notice that all California tonsorial artists will have to get their pictures taken. Applications, accompanied by photographs for the State files, will automatically win licenses for some 17,000 barbers who have been practicing for two years or more and who have lived in California for at least one year. The fee will be $2. Applicants who do not fall in this category must pay $10 for a State examination as to qualifications, it was announced, and $2 for a license. Barber apprentices will be examined for $5 and licensed for $1. The board will have application blanks ready by September 10 and all applications must be filed by October 28.

With a scheduled program and prospects of attendance potentially outrivaling the recent national convention in Seattle, the twenty-third annual convention of the California Real Estate Association slated October 10 to 14 at Santa Monica, will open for the first time in a number of years with the unified support of every real estate board in California.

California motorists contributed a total of $6,913,700 in automobile license fees last year. The major portion of which went toward maintenance and repair of state and county

RAVENS

Some white-tailed eagles were boasting one day of their bravery.

They were also saying how fine they were in every way and that their very name meant something splendid and free and strong.

As a matter of fact, though the white-tailed eagles won't admit it, they are less brave than any of the eagle families.

The ravens are not kindly at all and they love to fight.

They had often thought it would be great sport to have those "silly white-tailed eagles," as they called them, admit that they were not brave and have their leader beg for mercy from General Raven.

And, as you can imagine, when Brother Black Raven heard the eagles boasting, he knew it was high time to begin and frighten them.

So he called all the ravens together. Some of them were having their naps, but as soon as Brother Black Raven called them up they got in a great hurry, spread their wings and drilled a little bit just like soldiers.

Only instead of marching, they flew.

As General Raven came near the nest of the white-tailed eagles, he said in a very queer, croaking sort of voice:

"Good-morning!" That was rather mean of him to say, for, of course, he

He Called All the Ravens Together.

didn't really wish them a "Good-morning."

"Do you want to fight?" asked General Raven.

Still not a sound from the eagles.

There was a slight fluster and trembling, which the ravens could hear and which made them grin with delight, but the eagles never said a word.

They didn't even look at the ravens!

For they were so frightened they didn't dare look at them, and they kept thinking:

"Oh, won't those awful ravens and their ugly old general go away?"

The eagles, of course, thought the ravens were very ugly because they were so afraid of them.

"For the last time, do you want to fight us, eh?" asked General Raven.

And still the eagles said not a word—nor made a sound.

"Well, let me say then, for all of us," said General Raven, "that we think you're very cowardly, and we heard you talking before we came of your bravery.

"We wouldn't fight you because you're afraid of us, but you'll have to admit it after this," and with a deep chuckle, off went General Raven and his followers.

The eagles did not go on boasting, but they were very contented that the ravens had gone away!

"Musical" Blind Man's Buff

One of the players is blindfolded, and placed with his back to the players. Now all the players arrange themselves in line behind him, and someone sings the first line of any song. When this line is finished the blind man makes a guess at the identity of the singer. If it is correct, then the singer must take his place, and someone else sings a snatch of a song.

This is an amusing game, as, although it is seldom difficult to recognize a person's voice, when one sings the voice may sound rather different. It is a test to see whether one does really know the voices of one's friends—or rather, the singing voices, for there are people who seldom sing.

Housing Conditions of New York's Poor Bad

With the general increase of luxurious apartment houses for the wealthy the New York city health department is endeavoring to bring before the public the fact that housing conditions in certain parts of the lower and extreme upper East side have not kept pace with the sanitary progress of the rest of the city. The infant mortality and general mortality rates and the tuberculosis rate of these parts is considerably higher than the rates for the city as a whole. Field nurses from the department have recently completed a house-to-house survey of these districts. The conditions disclosed Louis I. Harris, health commissioner, describes as menacing and intolerable. Bedrooms are crowded and badly ventilated. Many families live in basements. Scattered throughout the sections are factory buildings which the commissioner regards as having a definite influence upon the health of the children. Doctor Harris hopes to arouse the city to the need of remedial measures.

Has Eye for Color

A ninety-four-year-old woman recently suggested a color scheme for the trolley cars of the Baltimore traction lines, which may be adopted as the standard. Mrs. Edward Block of Baltimore suggested the color combination. "Although I am far in my ninety-fifth year I still have an eye for the beautiful things of life," she says.

REDUCTION IN TAX RATE

Tax payers of Daly City are rejoicing over a good piece of news this week. The city council has made a reduction of 40 cents in the tax rate.

The property owners of Daly City should appreciate this action, and no doubt every tax payer will appreciate it, and especially as it is somewhat of a novelty to hear of a reduction in the tax rate these days.

They have good reason for rejoicing over this bit of good fortune, when they consider that all over this nation the general trend is for a raise in taxes, in the nation, in the states, in the counties and in the municipalities.

But here we have a reduction in the tax rate—a pleasing departure from the usual procedure in other sections of the country.

And no wonder the property owners of Daly City are feeling pretty good, thank you.

THE LIFE-GIVING SUN

Of all the ancient religious rites in which visible objects were venerated, the worship of the sun was the most logical, as has been demonstrated by modern science. All life on earth depends upon the beneficent rays of the sun, without which both animals and plants would sicken and die.

In recent years the particular light waves which have a reviving and healing effect upon living organisms have been identified and means have been employed for their practical use. These waves are called ultra-violet rays, and are invisible.

An important discovery was made a few years ago when it was found that ordinary window glass stops the health-giving rays. Then science developed a glass made of fused quartz, through which these waves pass freely. Now a type of artificial light which produces the rays has been perfected, whereby the same effects may be obtained whether the sun shines or not.

Ultla-violet rays, either natural or artificial, are used for the prevention and cure of rickets in children, and also serve to make adults to a great extent immune from colds and pneumonia, as well as to correct many weaknesses which make them susceptible to other diseases.

Thus the life-giving properties of the sun have been made to serve mankind in ways undreamed of by the early sun-worshippers.

RUBBER FARM PERILS

Should we ever have occasion to complain that a neighbor's chickens had devasted a corner of our garden, or that a pig had rooted therein, we might reflect upon the trials of the rubber farmer, and take comfort.

G. G. Moriarty, manager of a 5,000 acre rubber plantation in Sumatra, now touring the United States, recently told of some of the difficulties of rubber farming. His farm is situated adjacent to a native jungle, in which all sorts of wild beasts have their habitat, when they are not playing havoc with the rubber trees.

Elephants are the practical jokers of the animal kingdom, according to Mr. Moriarty, and their favorite sport is pulling up rubber trees with their trunks and tossing them at each other. The plantation is also frequently visited by tigers, rhinoceri, tropical deer, wild pigs and other inhabitants of the jungle, which likewise take their sport in messing up the place.

Still, the damage thus done does not prevent the raising and export of vast quantities of rubber, which is fairly profitable under the prices which have prevailed since restrictions in exports have become effective.

The increased demand for rubber, due to the growth of the automobile industry and the new uses which have been found for the resilient product, tend to assure the prosperity of the rubber farmer, in spite of the playfulness of elephants and other jungle neighbors.

WHAT FILIPINOS NEED

For three decades the problem of what the United States should do with the Philippine Islands has been a subject of wide discussion in Congress and elsewhere. As is usual in such cases, the exigencies of politics have largely obscured the real merits of the conflicting views.

It may be conceded that while the Islands embrace a region of great potential wealth, the natural resources of the archipelago have not been developed, and the natives are relatively poor. This is due principally to the uncertainty which has surrounded the future of the Islands. Capital in sufficient volume will not be available for needed development while this uncertainty exists.

Thoughtful Filipinos as well as Americans see disaster facing the natives were full independence granted them. The reasons for this were ably stated recently by Vincente Villamin, Filipino lawyer, who declared that independence would deprive the Islands of the free entry of 70 per cent of their exports into the United States. A further menace under independence would be that they would be swamped by immigration from China and Japan, which the Filipinos would be powerless to prevent, to say nothing of their exposed position, which would lay them open to danger of conquest in the event of another war.

What the Filipinos really need is that the United States make it plain that supervision and protection is to be maintained indefinitely, with the granting of an increasing measure of autonomy in local affairs.

Complete independence may appear desirable from a sentimental and theoretical standpoint, but for the reasons given it would be against the real interests of the Filipino people.

THE IDLER LOSES OUT

Glen Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, says in a recent syndicate article: "Society is unconsciously working toward a system of compulsory labor by making the idler and parasite a less and less popular figure." Here Dr. Frank points out one of the fundamental principles of American security and prosperity.

Up to the coming into being of America, wealth was always regarded not as the means toward progress or improvement, but simply the agency by which the possessor could live luxuriously and prodigally without worry or work, at the expense of others. This attitude caused the fall of Rome and the great powers of that period. In France it resulted in the Revolution. In our time it has been strikingly exemplified in Russia.

Here in America there should be no danger of Bolshevism, for the simple reason that the rich man usually works just as hard as, and often harder, than the man who has no capital but his hands. He uses his wealth to promote great industries and centralize business, with the subsequent improvement and well-being of all. In short, his money is to him the means to a very certain end: Ultimate perfection of his product or service.

Perfection is not yet here, but we can be sure that in America we are nearer it than ever before, anywhere in the world. And one of the greatest factors is what Dr. Frank speaks of, the discouragement of slothfulness, and the tendency of wealth to use itself for the good of all.

SOUSA ON TOUR AT 72

John Philip Sousa, famed bandmaster and "March King," who perhaps has done more to popularize instrumental music in America than any other man, living or dead, still wields his baton with masterly skill at the age of 72. On September 26 he will round out thirty-five years as the head of the great band which bears his name.

Mr. Sousa came into national prominence as leader of the United States Marine band from 1880 to 1892, during which time he also composed some of the long list of military marches which are known and played throughout the world. Since leaving the Marines to conduct his own organizations, his success has been remarkable.

One striking characteristic of Mr. Sousa's career has been his encouragement of American players and composers. It is said that when he first took charge of the Marine band there were only two American born musicians in the organization, and when he formed his own band, twelve years later, only eleven out of fifty were native Americans. On his present tour only two of his instrumentalists are foreign born, while nearly one-half of his players are graduates of American colleges and universities, it is said.

During the World war, Mr. Sousa was commissioned a lieutenant-commander in the Naval Reserve Force and trained hundreds of musicians at the Great Lakes naval station, where he had for a time the largest regularly organized band in the world.

Sousan's Band has played many concerts in Europe and has toured the world, being received everywhere with high acclaim. Its present tour will take it across the continent and back. In spite of his advanced age, Mr. Sousa is vigorous and active, and has no idea of retiring. His many admirers will congratulate him on the thirty-fifth anniversary of his band, and hope that he may live to lead it for many years to come.

THE PUBLIC FOOTS THE BILL

"Why is arson so prevalent in America?" asks the magazine Safeguarding America Against Fire.

"Why is it that today, with more and more agencies, public and private, ferreting out and bringing to justice the incendiary, the crime remains so common? Why is it that the fire loss today in many lines of business has become a reliable barometer of the condition, profitable or the reverse, of these businesses?

"First and foremost, is the state of public opinion. For some reason not entirely plain, the American people persist in winking at the most usual form of arson, the fraud fire to obtain the insurance. People do not comprehend that when they wink at fraud fires, they are winking at no one but themselves. They do not seem to understand that when insurance companies unwittingly pay a false claims, the losers are not the underwriters, but every insured property owner.

"Arson losses are defrayed out of the pockets of honest policyholders in two ways: Directly, since the insurance company merely collects from the many to reimburse the few who suffer loss; and indirectly, because the more fires and the higher the burning ratio, the higher the rate that must be paid for insurance protection. Nothing, it would seem, could be any clearer or more rational than this. And yet the American people for generations could not, or would not grasp it.

Slowly now, but surely, the public attitude is changing. But there is yet entirely too much sympathy wasted on the individual who can 'put it over' on 'the rich, soulless insurance company'—when, in reality, he is 'putting it over' on nobody but his sympathetic friends and neighbors. Only when the altered public attitude towards arson becomes general, will the incendiary's torch begin to flicker out in America. Meanwhile it persists as the chief factor in making this country the land of the self-destroyer of property."

A humorist's most serious business is trying to make folks smile.

ARCTIC AND TROPICS MAY FEED THE WORLD

The world is in no danger of starving so long as the Arctic and the tropics lie undeveloped, says Professor B. H. Crocheron, Director of Agricultural Extension at the University of California. Professor Crocheron recently returned from a trip to Alaska, on which he visited every important town except Nome. He traveled 1,300 miles down the Yukon and on all three of the railroads in the territory.

Impressed with the possibility of Alaska furnishing food for the temperate zone, Professor Crocheron says:

"Those who have predicted that Americans would cease to be a meat-eating people because of the lack of grazing lands and grazing animals have evidently failed to take into calculation the vast territory which we call Alaska. This area, one-fifth the size of the United States, has prairies measured in terms of thousands of square miles on which certain animals thrive. To be sure, the winters are long and severe and the earth is perpetually frozen below the surface thaw of summertime, but the mosses and grasses grow abundantly and over it vast herds roam at will. One firm has 125,000 reindeer. They are marketing 5,000 carcasses a year at successful prices and are now building a canning plant and operating a refrigerator ship. Caribou run wild by many thousands; one band of 70,000 swam the Yukon, blocking the way of steamers till they had passed. The College of Alaska is crossing the caribou on the reindeer to increase their size. The United States Experiment Station at Fairbanks is crossing the yak from Tibet on Galloway cattle, expecting to secure a breed of beef animals that will live and feed on the open range in winter. The cross is a queer looking beast with a body like a Galloway and a tail like a horse. You see it, but you don't believe it.

"All of which goes to show that the world is far from starving to death and that all estimates of the possible population which the world can support are only based upon present practices and present knowledge. From time to time knowledge grows and practices change, which upset the calculations of the pessimists. There are still many undeveloped frontiers. Civilization is largely based upon a narrow belt that we call the north temperate zone. The tropics and the Artic still lie, a fallow field for the future."

TRADE MISSIONARIES

The general public little realizes how many of the inventions and aids to comfort now in general use have been popularized through the persistence and far-sighted enterprise of business men. The same is true of new products, whose introduction is often attended with difficulty, although they later come to be considered indispensable.

Years ago when the Standard Oil Company was seeking a wider market for kerosene, then its principal product, its trade missionaries were sent to South America and China, giving away lamps and teaching the natives how to use them. Of course the lamps had to have kerosene, and China has ever since remained the world's best kerosene market.

The same methods were employed in introducting the blue flame stove, but when the demand had been created manufacturers were willing to make the stoves, which thereafter found a ready sale. Similar enterprise has been shown by public service companies in the development of household devices which use gas and electricity. Even though the equipment sold brings little profit, or none at all, the sustained demand thus created for fuel and energy increases consumption and makes possible the growth of these industries.

The widespread use of the things which make for the comforts of modern life is largely due to the untiring efforts of these missionaries of trade, who through educating the public to the use of what at first appear to be luxuries, finally cause them to be demanded as necessities.

WHERE CABBAGES ARE KINGS

John E. Tiedeman, in his "Motorlogue" in last Sunday's San Francisco Examiner, has a splendid writeup of the cabbage industry in the vicinity of Colma. The title of this interesting article is "Where Cabbages Are Kings." Mr. Tiedeman writes:

"The district lies partly in San Francisco county and almost wholly in San Mateo county. . . . It is that section of the two counties that is immediately contiguous to the little villa of Colma.

"In the outskirts of this town at the very head of the famed Peninsula 'bottleneck' there are vast fields in which yearly there are planted row on row of cabbages. In fact, within the last few years this territory has become the major cabbage patch of the entire state.

"According to the latest available statistics Colma in 1926 shipped 215 railway carloads of cabbages to many sections of the state and to other parts of the United States. All the remainder of the state shipped 462 carloads from many different shipping points.

"The growth of the cabbage raising industry near Colma has been gradual. It has reached its present importance within the last few years and is being increased with each succeeding twelve month.

"The district begins within the southern limits of San Francisco county, and in fact there are small fields of cabbages within the very limits of the great city itself. The real important section, however, lies almost entirely within San Mateo county.

"In order to obtain the best land for the cabbages so that they may the sooner mature and reach the market in their most perfect state, the growers have selected the district through which the Skyline boulevard has been constructed. Here the fogs supply much moisture for the plants.

"All along this most important artery of traffic into the peninsula there are great fields of cabbages wherein there are annually planted straight rows of plants which in the course of a short time become the fine heads of cabbages that are so favorably known on the vegetable markets the coutry over.

"The sloping fields early in the spring and later in the summer present a picture of precision, the rows and rows of dark green plants marching in almost military array up the hillsides and down the intervening little valleys.

"Not all the rows are in the same direction, and thus there is formed an immense checkerboard pattern of green fields, in the center of nearly all of which is a huge water tank from which the early tender plants receive their meed of moisture so that they may grow to maturity faster.

"Those who have seen the great fields in the heydey of their glory will agree that is no misnomer to speak of the district as being 'where cabbages are kings,' for that they are indeed. Nothing else sems to matter to the growers of the annual crop of the great globular vegetables from which many dishes are cooked.

"For miles on both sides of the Skyline boulevard these fields of orderly plants are to be seen. In many of them the workers are busy cultivating the vegetables almost the entire year round, for the cabbage, in its several varieties, may be grown on the peninsula all year except for a couple of winter months.

"Farther along the Skyline boulevard the cabbage fields gradually merge into the artichoke fields, and whereas cabbage growing appears to be the prerogative of the Italians, the artichoke has been preempted by the Portuguese residents of the state.

"To those who make a journey down the Skyline boulevard, the trip through the cabbage fields is merely one incident in a beautiful trip."

THE NATION'S CAPITAL

The wonder city that will be Washington in years to come is pictured in plans of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission which call for an expenditure of many millions of dollars for new plazas, parks, parkways, recreational centers, airways, inner and outer boulevards, streets, monuments, public buildings, stadiums, underground garages, street widening and other improved transportation facilities.

Tentative plans provide ultimately for the addition to Washington's 228 miles of beautiful, shady asphalt streets of several hundred miles of new thoroughfares in the District of Columbia and adjacent territory in Maryland and Virginia.

In respect to street improvement, the District of Columbia is only now beginning to come into its own again. Seventy-one streets are being improved with asphalt this summer, and several additional concrete and other type streets are to be resurfaced with asphalt.

FARMER EVER AT WAR

While farming is apparently the most peaceful of pursuits, in reality the farmer is everlastingly at war. Not with his fellowmen, but with the billions of insects and other animal life which menace his crops on every hand.

Unfortunately, the farmer is in most cases poorly equipped to carry on this incessant warfare effectively. The boll weevil, the army worm, the corn borer, the gypsy moth, the cabbage butterfly, and other hordes of insects and parasites are working day and night to set his best efforts at naught. And each of these pests presents a distinct problem.

In this warfare, as in warfare among human beings, science must be brought into action in order to secure the desired results. Without scientific aid in fighting the pests which menace the farmers' crops, it is asserted by high authorities that in time human life would become extinct. The insects and parasites would completely overrun the earth.

It is some comfort to know, then, that under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture, earnest scientists are working diligently to find better means of controlling these pests, and are meeting with a fair degree of success.

Information of the utmost value to the farmer is available through the county farm agents, bulletins from government sources, articles by experts published in the press, and the example of informed neighbors. He owes it to himself to profit by this information and co-operate with these agencies which stand ready to aid him in his warfare against destructive insect pests.

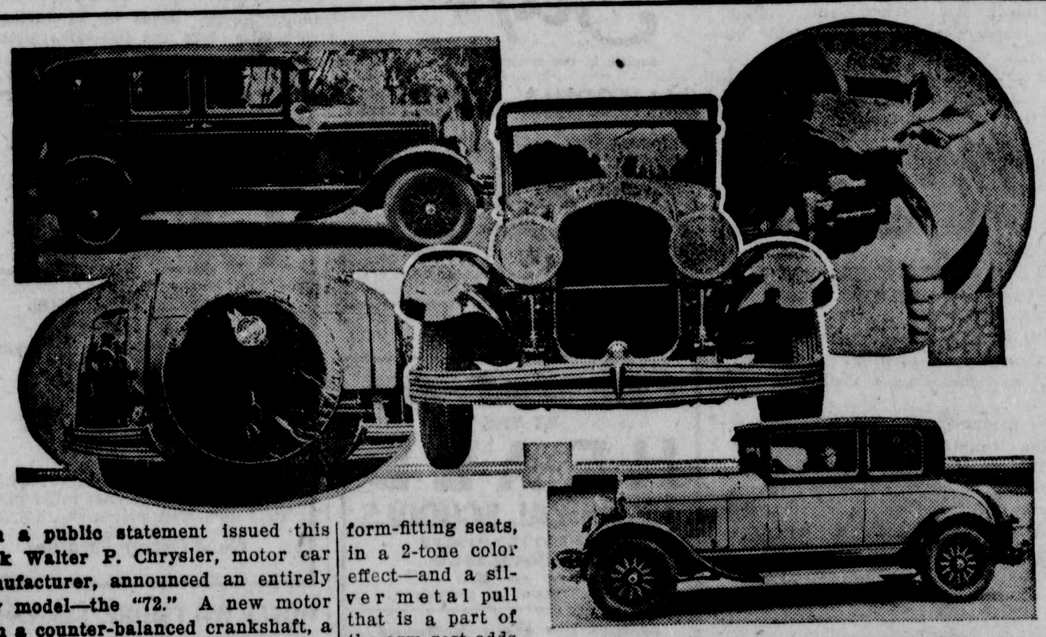
CHRYSLER "72" EMBODIES NEW FEATURES



In a public statement issued this week Walter P. Chrysler, motor car manufacturer, announced an entirely new model—the "72." A new motor with a counter-balanced crankshaft, a larger bore and stroke, which produces 75 horsepower and is capable of maintaining a speed of 72 miles or more per hour is the outstanding feature. Ten inches have been added to the frame, which gives the new car an appearance that was not found in the old models. Great care has been shown in the selection of interior decorations and fittings. Beautiful mohair covers the deeply upholstered form-fitting seats, in a 2-tone color effect—and a silver metal pull that is a part of the arm rest adds to the complete comfort found in the new cars. The picture in the upper left corner is that of the new Crown sedan—in the lower right corner is the new four-pasenger coupe, which is one of the most striking models of the "72" line. (Center) is a head-on view of the new Chrysler radiator and the new full drum headlights mounted on nickled posts. The picture in the upper right corner shows the housing which covers the blocks of live rubber in which all the spring shackles are set. This feature greatly improves the riding qualities of the car. The lower left corner shows a picture of the new factory-built bumper, which has been designed not only to protect the rear end of the car, but to improve its appearance by following the lines of the spare tire.

We are now displaying in our show rooms the new "52," "62," "72" and "82" Chrysler. You are invited to come in and look them over. You'll be most welcome.

—We also have a few excellent buys in high-grade 1927 second-hand Chryslers.

Poultry Victims of Floods

Human beings, generally, are the chief recipients of aid from the Red Cross in times of disaster, but in the recent floods on the Mississippi, animals were rescued and cared for in great numbers, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. At Opelousas, St. Landry parish, La., the largest temporary hen yard in the United States was constructed to feed 100,000 chickens driven from their roosts by the flood waters. The feathered refugees were fed by the Red Cross, as were 30,000 hogs, 10,000 mules and some 30,000 head of cattle. One of the problems arising from the work was to find the owners.

The GREEN CLOAK

By YORKE DAVIS

WNU Service. Copyright, 1926

STORY FROM THE START

Dr. Ronald McAlister, psychologist, undertakes to solve the mystery of the murder of a recluse, Henry Morgan. The dead man's papers reveal that he had been in New Zealand, where McAlister had lived in his youth. Will Harvey testifies to seeing a woman in a green cloak at the Morgan home the night of the murder. Doctor McAlister is asked to see a young woman patient in a hospital. In her delirium she mutters in a strange language which only McAlister understands. He suspects she may know something of the murder. A carefully hidden map is discovered by McAlister and Assistant District Attorney Ashton in Morgan's home. While they are searching a young woman enters the house in the darkness and escapes, leaving behind a green cloak. In response to an advertisement of the finding of a green cloak, a young woman, giving her name as Jane Perkins, housemaid at The Meredith, claims it. McAlister takes two laboratory instruments to The Meredith for an undisclosed purpose. The head waiter, Wilkins, admits Jane Perkins is employed at the hotel. By a tatoo mark on the arm she is advertised as the hospital patient. McAlister hypnotizes the girl.

He stood perfectly still before her, except that the hand which held the mirror permitted it to swing very slowly, pendulum-wise, before her, though always at an angle that sent the beam straight into her eyes.

From my corner of the room I watched him breathlessly. Of course it was perfectly obvious to see what he was doing. The examination of her eyes had been a mere pretext. His real object in inducing the girl to strain her eyes upward was to throw her into a hypnotic sleep. The method he had taken was an old-fashioned one, and one he rarely used. At the laboratory he hypnotized people almost daily by the simple and almost instantaneous process of having them lie down and telling them that they were going to sleep. But that method was absolutely dependent upon a condition which could not exist here. The patient must expect to be hypnotized and be in a state of willing submission. We had no reason to suppose that Jane Perkins would submit herself to any such test as that in the hands of strangers. And even with his mirror he would not be able to hypnotize her if she should suspect that this was what he was trying to do, and should resist. But his confident, friendly manner, his easy assumption of authority, the fact that he came from the same part of the world as herself—all this speedily disarmed suspicion.

At the end of three or four minutes of silence the doctor turned away and laid his little mirror upon the table.

"It's five minutes past eight," he said, with a second glance at his watch. "We haven't any time to lose. Close all the windows; that's the first thing to do—and lock them. And then we'll bolt both doors—it won't do to take any chances—and, in general, try to be ready for anything she may do. I think you'd better stand behind her chair, over yonder, where she won't see you at first. Now—are you ready?"

He stationed himself where he had stood before, just a pace or two away from the chair where the girl lay asleep. His eyes were shining, and every line of the attitude of his big sinewy body bespoke the relaxation possible only to nervous systems of very high order, the relaxation that is ready to exert its utmost effort in any direction; that is braced against nothing because it is expecting anything.

And then, softly at first but growing louder, he began to hum once more that old Maori death chant.

From my station behind the chair I could see nothing of the girl, except one hand, which hung out over the arm of it. I fixed my eyes on that, and as I stood there saw it change, saw in it the index of some mysterious incredible transformation that must be permeating every fiber of her body. It had been Jane Perkins' hand a moment ago—a chambermaid's hand, pudgy, lifeless, inexpressive. Now, indefinably, it was different, altogether different. The fingers stretched apart a little as if they tingled with the warmth and life of a new current, intenser, more electrical. The hand opened wide, then slowly clenched itself into a fist; and last of all it sprang open again, distended to its widest reach, with galvanic quickness which Jane Perkins' nerves would never have been capable of commanding.

The doctor broke off his song, and there followed, for one dead moment, a silence, which was shattered at the end of it by a strange, weird, half-suppressed outcry. The next instant the girl had flashed out of her chair, and stood confronting me. The quickness of her motion was absolutely indescribable. Her face was now the one we had seen in the hospital and had glimpsed dimly in the dark in Henry Morgan's study.

At the sight of me she shrank, crouched, rather, for something about the action suggested that it might be followed by a spring. Her hand flashed to her bosom and explored there for something—a knife probably—that it did not find. What she would have done then, whether she would have flung herself upon me unarmed, I do not know, for the doctor began speaking to her just then, quietly, authoritatively, and in the Maori tongue. He was not trying to soothe her fears, or at least not doing it in any way that is commonly practiced by us modern people. He was giving her orders, orders which he was prepared to enforce by brute strength if she should make it necessary. So much was plain from his manner.

Of course I could not understand a word he said. The girl cowered at the voice, but it seemed to reassure her, for all of that. The wild light in her eyes died. They became sullen. She squatted on the floor in a corner of the room. Evidently chairs and their uses were as strange to her as her present attitude would have been to Jane Perkins.

Then began one of the strangest scenes I ever witnessed. Except for what I could gather from their faces, and from the inflection of his questions and her sullen, half-defiant answers, it was totally unintelligible to me. Even the inflections told me little, for the language itself is spoken in a queer sort of sing-song, which betrayed no family relationship with any other language I ever heard. But in the doctor's face I could read strange matters—excitement, dawning comprehension and dawning horror, too. It was strangely tantalizing to know that this mystery, the clue to which I had vainly sought, was in process of being unraveled right before my eyes and I was as much in the dark as ever.

Then, as if the doctor had read my thoughts, he spoke to the girl in English:

"Fanenna," he said, "I am talking English. I am going to ask you questions in English, and you will understand me. Did you understand what I said then?"

The girl nodded. And yet I was sure that if I had spoken to her she would not have comprehended a word. It was in its way as strange and perfect a demonstration of the possibilities of hypnotism as I had ever seen. The doctor called in Jane Perkins' memory to act as the girl's interpreter.

"What is the man's name," the doctor asked, "the man who sent you?"

Her answer was two words that sounded like "Osa Enns." I saw that for a moment it puzzled the doctor as much as it did me. But the next moment, evidently, he understood, for his face lighted rather grimly.

"You came away, did you, without the thing he sent you to get?"

She nodded.

"And you hadn't been told to kill the old man? You didn't mean to kill him when you stole into the house?"

She answered with a deep-throated guttural, even to my ears, unmistakably in the negative.

"Then why did you kill him?"

She flung her head back, her eyes blazed defiance and from her lips poured forth a torrent of speech.

"Stop!" said the doctor. "If you can understand English, you can talk it, too. Speak in the same language I am speaking in, and tell why you killed him."

"I was sworn to kill him."

The words came thickly, slowly clumsily, for tongue and lips were finding difficulty with them, but they were clearly and quite intelligibly English.

I saw the doctor's face light up at the sound of them, for it was the completion of the most interesting experiment he had ever tried. The girl was still submerged, completely, in her wild, primitive, under-self. She was no more Jane Perkins than as if she had occupied another body altogether, and yet, by the strange hypnotic power of suggestion, the doctor was compelling her to use Jane Perkins' knowledge of English to talk with.

"Who swore you to such an oath?" he asked.

"My mother, when she was dying. It was a vengeance. He had murdered my father. He murdered him before I was born."

"If it happened before you were born," said the doctor quickly, "then, unless you knew beforehand that Henry Morgan was the man you were sworn to murder, how did you know it when you found him in that house?"

Out of the front of her blouse she pulled a little chamois-skin bag which hung about her neck by a fine gold chain.

"By this," she said. "It had belonged to him, the murderer. My mother kept it and gave it to me so that I should know him."

For an instant I did not understand, but immediately after, the way she had detected our presence in that room, by the smell, gave me an inkling.

"Then you can tell people by their odor?" the doctor asked.

"As a dog does," she answered simply.

"He murdered your father, you say, before you were born? Do you know who your father was? What was his name?"

"Flanka," she answered.

For an instant the doctor gazed at her wide-eyed; then, turning away to conceal his excitement, he struck one palm, softly, three or four times with the other fist.

Presently he turned back to the girl.

"Did your mother swear you to anything else?"

"No."

"Did she give you anything when she died?"

"No."

"Not even a message? I mean did she tell you anything, anything about Flanka?"

"She told me these words," said the girl, "she said them a great many times, 'Ouan feef, ti oues. Ten sout.'"

That is the best reproduction I can make of the sound of them. I supposed she was speaking in Maori, until, glancing up at the doctor, I saw that he was as much puzzled as I was.

"What's that?" he asked. "Say it again."

She repeated the syllables glibly and without the slightest variation in her inflection of them.

"What does that mean?" he questioned. "That's not your language nor mine."

She shook her head.

"You don't understand it yourself?"

Again she shook her head, and repeated once more the queer, meaningless syllables.

There was a moment of silence, the doctor gazing at her in a puzzled way, all his faculties concentrated upon this fresh mystery.

In the midst of that silence the girl sprang suddenly erect, and from her tense attitude it was evident that she was listening; that she had heard something. To our ears all was still.

"Hearing abnormal, too," murmured the doctor in a swift aside to me.

Then he spoke to the girl. "Fanenna," he said, "you are to go into that other room and wait until I call for you. When I want you, I will call, 'Perkins,' and you will come out, believing that it is the first time I have called you from the bedroom. You will remember the knife and vase of water, but you will believe that you have dreamed it. And when I call the word 'Perkins,' you will wake up and come in. Go now." He unlocked the door as he spoke.

She obeyed without hesitation. By that time I myself heard footsteps approaching down the corridor.

"Go in there after her, Phelps," said the doctor, "and see that the windows and doors in all the other rooms of the apartment are locked and bolted. Then come back here as quickly as you can."

I heard a tap at the door just as I was finishing the task, and immediately afterward heard the doctor open it. When I returned to the sitting room, he turned toward me and spoke rather quickly. There was a note of suppressed excitement in his voice.

"Phelps, here's Ashton come to pay us a call."

Without waiting for me to comment on the situation, he turned back to the district attorney.

"I thought it not unlikely," he said, "that, with one intention or another, you would make us a visit this evening."

His manner was perfectly neutral, neither friendly in the old way, nor hostile as it might have been expected to be after the scene in the laboratory.

Ashton flushed a little. "Oh, I've come to apologize," he said. "My accusation against you and Mr. Phelps this afternoon was quite unwarranted."

"Antipodes" Too Often Term Wrongly Used

The term "antipodes" is strictly applied to any two peoples or places on opposite sides of the earth and so situated that a straight line drawn from one to another passes through the center of the earth. Loosely, however, the term is applied to any place on the opposite side of the earth from us. China is popularly supposed to be the antipodes of the United States and there is an old saying that if one were to dig a hole deep enough he would fall into China. But this is a misconception, for China and the United States are both in the northern hemisphere. The true antipodes of the United States is a region in the Indian ocean west of Australia. No part of the North American continent has its antipodes in any land America fall in the region of China, the Philippines and Borneo, while the antipodes of Europe and Asia are in the South Pacific. The approximate antipodes of London is Antipodes island, near New Zealand.—Pathfinder Magazine.

WESTWARD THE COURSE OF INDUSTRY TAKES ITS WAY

In January, 1908, the center of industry in the United States was on the northern boundary of Indiana, about 110 miles east of Chicago. In January, 1918, it was still on the northern boundary of Indiana, but had moved about 50 miles nearer to Chicago. In January, 1926, it had moved 25 miles to the southwest of its position in 1918 and was about 50 miles southeast of Chicago. This slow movement of the center of industry during a period when the capacity of prime movers in central stations and manufacturing plants increased about 140 per cent indicates that industrial development in the United States is proceeding at about the same rate in all sections, but a trifle more rapidly in the western and southern parts of the country.

These determinations of the center of industry, which have been made by the Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, are based on the capacity of the steam engines, steam turbines, water wheels, and internal-combustion engines installed in manufacturing plants and in public utility power plants. Twice the weight is given to the power equipment in public utility plants, as it is used twice as much as power equipment in manufacturing plants. Previous determinations of the center of industry have been based on the installed capacity of prime movers in manufacturing plants only. It is believed that more representative results are obtained by using the capacity of power equipment in both manufacturing and public utility plants.

The geographic center of the United States is near the center of the northern boundary of Kansas, and the center of population is in Owen county, southwestern Indiana. The center of industry of the United States in 1926 was therefore 640 miles east by north of the geographic center and about 170 miles north of the center of population.

The double feature bill at the State Theatre next Sunday, September 18, will be Warner Baxter in "Drums of the Desert," and George O'Brien and Olive Borden in "Fig Leaves."

REASONS FOR LAST DOLE FALL EXPLAINED

Most of the danger from tail-spins such as that which led to the crash and mysterious disappearance of Captain W. P. Erwin's "Dallas Spirit" while searching for the lost Dole fliers may soon be removed by technical changes in design.

This is the opinion of Dean Baldwin M. Woods, professor of Aerodynamics at the University of California, who has been studying the cause of tail-spin for several years in collaboration with other specialists.

The great danger from tail-spins, he explains, lies in the pilot's inability to tell just exactly what his plane is going to do. With little more effort it would be possible to solve the problem in dynamics involved and construct planes which will behave in a certain manner when the tail drops and the plane falls off sideways into the spin. Then it would be much more easy for the pilot to bring his plane out of the spin before crashing.

A tail-spin occurs, Dean Wood says, when for some reason the plane slows in speed below the minimum necessary for support. The plane points upward, the air forces are unable to hold the weight, and the plane, with its pilot and navigator drops. As soon as this drop starts, the plane turns over with a motion similar to a side slip, nose down, with its tail revolving in great circles like a broken kite. Popular conceptions of a plane dropping with its tail down are wrong, Dean Wood explains, as the tail-spin merely starts in that position.

In an analysis of the reasons why Captain Erwin may have fallen into a tail-spin, Dean Wood lists three important causes. First, he says, and probably most important of all, is the possibility of the craft having been unbalanced by unequal use of the heavy load of fuel. He points out that a plane taking off for the Hawaiian flight is from two to three times its normal weight, and that while flying this weight is going to disappear as the gasoline and oil is consumed. If the tanks are not arranged carefully, the center of gravity of the plane and the center of wind pressure may change too greatly with reference to each other and the plane becomes unmanagable.

Second, the pilot, especially in fog or at night, if his instruments are not functioning properly or the light on the board goes out, may lose his sense of equilibrium—lose the horizon it is called—and unconsciously point his plane upward at a dangerous angle, bringing on the fatal dive. Radio operators recall that just at the moment of Erwin's fatal fall, Navigator Eichwaldt sent out a message that the light had gone out on the instrument board and that they could not see a thing.

Third, the fabric on the tail surfaces may rip off and the back part of the fuselage lose its buoyancy, again causing the plane to tail spin. Dean Woods points out that Captain Erwin was forced back from his first take-off because of torn fabric, and that freshly applied fabric might easily tear again.

PROTECT CHILDREN USING THE STREETS

California traffic officers have been instructed by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, to use every means at their disposal to protect children upon the streets and highways in going to and from school.

At the same time, Snook issued an appeal to motorists to drive carefully and to parents to instruct their children how to keep out of danger, pointing out that schools are now reopening all over the state and that thousands of children will be compelled to use traffic congested roads.

The officers were told to arrest any motorist driving in a reckless manner where children are walking or going faster than the legal limit in passing schoolhouses.

Parents and teachers were urged to instruct children to use the left side of the road so that they may face approaching traffic. He declared it is a dangerous practice to permit young children to walk on the roads or to cross them unless accompanied by older persons.

Children, he declared, should be taught not to "jaywalk" and never to cross a street without looking both ways for approaching vehicles.

To the motorist Snook said: "Drive carefully. Children are irresponsible and easily confused. You never know when a pair of little feet is going to dodge out in front of you for children are not trained to judge distance as you are. Have your brakes tested. You may need them badly; but don't drive so fast that they will be useless. Don't guess at what a child is going to do at an intersection; wait until you're sure."

The State Supreme Court has ruled that the pedestrian has the right-of-way over an automobile in every case, It is therefore your responsibility to see that you do not injure or kill any person traveling afoot.

The chief constable of one of the British cities has expressed the opinion that "if a pedestrian were as careful as the average motorist, many of whom drive fast, but safely, there would be fewer accidents. Walking to the common danger seems to be more prevalent than driving to the common danger."

ON THE DESERT BRIM

By Wesley Strong

In the land of gold there's stories told,
Out where the West begins;
Where men are shot for nothing or not—
And pay in flesh for sins.

The trains are drove into the burning stove—
(Death Valley in its prime);
It takes a scout ter foo about
With Death right behind.

Men have no soul, fer in that hole
It's burned right out o' their hide.
They're just as a weed that thrives and feeds
On a lonesome desert slide.

Thru the sand and storm, weak and wan,
They mine fer borax, 'cause yet
They know from hills mountains grow,
And prosperity thrives on sweat.

They go down all poor—it's borax lure,
And back weighed to the knees;
With wagons all full the mules pull,
It's stories sometimes like these.

But I guess again it's stories of pain,
In the heart there's a place that's weak;
They're afraid to say they knelt to pray;
Oh, Flesh! so strong with Spirit so meek.

I saw men go down without a frown
Fer borax dust—glitterin' gold,
Down into the fire for wealth desire,
Their faces sad stories told.

The sun came up in the desert cup
Like a poker all hot and red;
We find them alone, all white and prone,
In the solemn regiment of dead.

That's how men fight for borax, white,
Like men will fight for gin—
But they're good old scouts, these men about
The edge of the desert rim.

RICH INDIAN WOMAN

It may be surprising to many to know that one of the largest unearned incomes received by any person in America last year went to an Indian woman. Charles H. Burke, commissioner of Indian affairs, in a recent statement revealed that one Oklahoma woman of the Quapaw tribe, whose name was not given, received during the fiscal year ended June 30 the sum of $188,296.30, or $513 a day, from lead and zinc troyalties.

Many other Indians of this tribe received amounts ranging from $35,000 to $112,000 for the year, while the tribe as a whole received $1,307,114 as their returns on lead and zinc leases on their land. Even this large sum is small compared to the royalties received by tribes owning oil lands.

When the government induced the Five Nations and other tribes to locate in the old Indian Territory, now a part of the state of Oklahoma, during the middle of the last century, it was little thought that the lands granted to them held some of the most valuable mineral deposits in the world, including oil, coal, lead and zinc.

Development of these resources during the past twenty-five years have made many of the descendants of these tribes wealthy, and this wealth has led to many intermarriages between them and the whites. A good many white men would probably consider the copper-colored lady with an income of $513 a day a rather attractive matrimonial prospect.

INTELLIGENT ADVERTISING

"Public utility companies will spend $28,000,000 for advertising this year."

Here in this news item is food for thought. It makes one wonder if there are still reactionaries who insist that advertising is useless and a waste of investors' money.

Statistics on the strides that advertising expenditure and space have taken, would be of tremendous interest to the student of modern industry and business. In the past twenty years it has unquestionably doubled itself many times.

Through the various mediums, and most important of all, the newspapers, advertising and publicity have grown to proportions where they are among the greatest forces known for furthering progress and forwardness.

The recent unprecedented growth of the public utilities are directly traceable, in a large degree, to the effect of wide and intelligent advertising. Far from being a waste of investors' money, it is a safeguard in that if the company or product advertised is honest and worth-while, that company's business or sales will increase in direct proportion to the amount of advertising.

Progressive business is learning that the only better thing for business than extensive advertising is more extensive advertising, plus a good product or service.

The patrol, on investigation, found that the ladder was left in that position through carelessness, but it is a dangerous sort of practice. In case of suspicious characters, call Randolph 55 without delay.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Company No. 4, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, has been meeting for several months at the homes of different members each week. Beginning next Thursday evening they will again meet in the company hall, as each member has in turn entertained the auxiliary. The last hostess was Mrs. S. A. Landini, of Winchester street, who entertained on Thursday evening. Lindbergh decorations were a delightful feature.

ALL MIXED UP

Speaking of typographical errors, would it be accurate to label the mistake in the following, taken from the "Pick Ups" department of the Chicago Evening Post, a "radiographic error?"

"A recent bride asked her husband to copy the radio receipe one morning. The husband did his best, but got two stations at the same time. One was broadcasting G. M. C. A. setting-up exercises and the other recipes. This is what he got:

"Hands on hips, place one cupful of flour on shoulders, raise knees and depress toes, and wash thoroughly in one-half cupful of milk.

"In four counts raise both legs and mash two hard-boiled eggs in a sieve. Repeat six times. Inhale one teaspoonful of baking powder and one cupful of flour, breathe through the nose and exhale and sift.

"Attention! Jump to a stride, stand and bend the white of an egg backward and forward overhead, and in four counts make a stiff dough that will stretch at the waist. Lie flat on the floor and roll into a marble the size of a walnut.

"Hop backward and forward in boiling water, but do not do not boil into a stationary run afterward. In ten minutes remove from the fire and dry with a towel. Breathe deeply, put on a bathrobe and serve with a fish soup."

A critic declares an English movie actress to be without a peer. But she is probably doing her best to land one.

Low flying is prohibited in many cities, but the high flyers go on unmolested.

A sport writer is one of the few persons who get paid for guessing wrong.

Mexican politicians are no more modest than the American variety, according to a recent report of a poster being distributed, bearing the portrait of General Arnulfo R. Gomez, candidate for president. Under the portrait is the general's name, with the inscription "El hombre sin vicios" (The man without vices).

SENSE AND NONSENSE

By H. H.

VOLUME I FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1927 NUMBER 8

Published in the interests of the people of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Excited Policeman, all out of breath—"Say, boy, did you see a big yellow car with black wheels come around this corner going about fifty?"

Little Boy—"Yes, sir."

Cop — "How long ago?"

Little Boy—"It'll be a year this coming Christmas."

"STERLING," the wall board of satisfaction.

I'd hate to be a horse fly,
And with the horse flies buzz;
The picking for the horse fly
Ain't what it used to was.

"ABERDEEN," the coal that satisfies.

"What's the largest room in the world?"

"What?"

"Room for improvement."

Customer—"I want to try on that suit in the window."

Clerk — "Not on your life; you use the dressing room."

When you think of building, think of H. H.

Considering where most of them end nowadays, "Courtship" sure is the right word for it.

Life is like concrete. It requires a lot of sand, but the right kind of sand.

Uncle: "I hear you are going to school again soon."

Bobby: "Yes, sir."

Uncle: "What part of school do you like best?"

Bobby: "Coming home."

Doctor—"Sambo, I know but one thing that will help your rheumatism, and that is an electric bath."

Sambo—"No, suh, docuth, you ain't talkin' to dis here niggah. Ah had a fren what too one o' dem at Sing Sing, and it done drowned him."

It's fun to build a home. Your home! We can help you with our plans.

Councilman to Chief of Police—"Here is a woman who writes that she doesn't know which way to turn."

Chief—"Send her a copy of the traffic regulations."
